Charles A. Sutton, of Bridgeport, investment you ever made. Your hair Republican nominee for the House of will immediately take on that life, Delegates of West Virginia, has issued the following address to voters:

Bridgeport, W. Va., Oct. 24, 1912. To the Voters of Harrison County: At the Republican primary election, for the House of Delegates. This was indeed gratifying to me, for it was proof that the rank and file of our party believe in me and are willing to entrust me with the solemn duty of representing them.

I had hoped to make a canvass of the whole county, but the state demanded my services and I have been denied the pleasure of calling upon the voters and talking with them on subjects now engaging their attention. As a member of the state militia, I spent two months in the Paint creek section and I want to say to you that I honestly believe my experience there has been such that I am qualified to consider, with enlightened intelligence, remedial measures which will undoubtedly be introduced at the coming session of our legislature.

I desire to say, further, that what I witnessed in the strike zone confirmed my previous belief that all

> To my mind the crucial test of every man holding public office is this: Will he be true to his trust or will "the fingle of the guinea help the hurt that honor feels?" I firmly believe that merited victory awaits us on November 5, and if my forecast is correct. I am willing to let my record in the legislature answer

To each of the twelve thousant voters in Harrison county, my colleague, Mr. Parrish, and I submit our cause. And if you further honor us by commissioning us your representatives, we affirm that we will return to you, unsullied, at the expiration of our tenure, the trust delegated through your suffrage.

> Respectfully yours, CHAS. A. SUTTON.

WESTON, Oct. 24-The nine rear-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Allman, who was painfully shot while playing with a cartridge used in army guns, is improving nicely. The little fellow was playing with the cartridge and pounded it with a hammer when it went off, passing through his hand and foot, causing painful but not serious wounds.
